PRESS RELEASE

Wihlborgs signs lease with Atkins and the law firm WSA at Prisma, Helsingborg

The design, engineering and project-management consultancy Atkins signed an agreement for 730 m² at Prisma, Wihlborgs' new office building in Helsingborg. Wesslau Söderqvist Advokatbyrå (WSA) also recently signed a contract for 420 m².

Prisma is the first office building to be finished in Helsingborg's new Oceanhamnen district and the building's spectacular architecture will make it a new Helsingborg landmark.

Assistansbolaget Försäkring Sverige and the tech hub HETCH moved in during December. HETCH previously signed a lease for 2,000 m² at Prisma and has now decided to exercise the option for an additional 1,700 m². In addition to a community and workplaces for tech companies, HETCH will provide welcome and co-working services, and a meeting point for the entire building. In January, they will be joined by KPMG and EY. Atkins and WSA will move in during the summer.

"Our employees are our most important resource and so it's particularly exciting that we can create a new, modern workplace in one of the most attractive locations in central Helsingborg. Moreover, the proximity to Helsingborg central station makes it an excellent location for commuters," says Johannes Erlandsson, Managing Director at Atkins Sweden.

"We chose Prisma because we like to be at the cutting edge. Oceanhamnen, and especially Prisma, feels like the perfect step for us in terms of location, business and the environment. We look forward to networking with Prisma's other interesting tenants and it means a lot to us that the building is environmentally certified," says Petra Loodberg, Partner and Attorney at Law, WSA.

"This justifies our conviction that an office's design and location is an important factor for many companies when it comes to attracting the best talent. With Prisma, we can help some of the most exciting companies in Helsingborg create attractive, inspiring environments for their employees," says Ulrika Hallengren, CEO of Wihlborgs.
